NEWS FROM NOME.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 4, 1900. Travel and traffic from the Alaskan gold fields has opened for the season by the breaking up of the ice on the Yukon and the opening of the ice fields in the Behring Sea. As a result, scores of arduous who were imprisoned behind the icy bars through the long Arctic winter are returning to Seattle on every steamer from the north, bringing almost unbelievable stories of the richness of placer claims of the Klondike and of the newly discovered but fabulously rich Cape Nome country. We are not compelled to depend for our confirmation of these stories entirely upon the unsupported tales of the returning adventurers. At the Seattle assay office there is daily accumulating more positive evidence in the shape of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of gold dust and nuggets. During the latter half of the month of June, the first fortnight of returning boats, the daily deposits of virgin gold have run all the way from $15,000, to $250,000, averaging almost $100,000 a day, and the season only beginning. A conservative estimate of the amount of Alaskan gold to be received during the month of July places it at $3,000,000 worth, or $100,000 a day. The gold which has come thus far has been chiefly from the Yukon country, although several ships have arrived from the Behring coast. The reason for this is that there is little clearing up done in either district during the cold winter months. What work is done in the winter is in the direction of developing and accumulating at the surface the gold-bearing gravel to be washed as soon as the temperature will permit. This is possible several weeks earlier on the upper Yukon than it is in the Cape Nome country.

Last year the Seattle assay office received over thirteen millions in gold. The assayer, E. A. Wing, places his estimate for this year's receipts at over twenty millions, and the plant has been enlarged to accommodate the handling of that amount. This will come almost exclusively from Alaska and the Yukon territory, a gold-producing country which until three years ago was almost unprospected and entirely unknown to the world. Even now the enormous expanse of territory is but scarcely begun to be prospected and the gold already in sight cannot be exhausted within twenty of the brief summers during which mining machinery can be operated to advantage.

All last winter the prospecting continued along the beaches of Behring sea, and new and richer finds were reported with almost incredible frequency. The reports from the district brought out by the first steamer from there, which arrived June 17th, fully justify the rush of thousands of men to the district from and through Seattle during the first open months of this season.

The first steamer to return from Nome was the Jeanie, which arrived here on June 17. The Jeanie left Seattle for Nome on May 20 and so made the round trip, including a stop of three days at her destination to unload her six hundred tons of freight, in forty-seven days. Much ice was encountered in large floating fields in the open sea, but the steamer worked its way through the enormous bergs with rare good fortune and celerity. In places the ice was packed so solid in the open sea, and piled so high, that it was impossible to proceed, and it was necessary to wait a few hours for it to break up. At one time the ice drifting in on the steamer, apparently from every side, threatened to crush her, yet by careful management she succeeded in avoiding injury.

According to advices brought down on the Jeanie, Nome had already begun to show great activity. All winter parties with dog-teams had been making their way down the Yukon, a route involving an ice and snow journey of 3,000 miles, yet made in safety by hundreds of hardy adventurers anxious to reach the new fields before the opening of water navigation. Scores of others went in by way of Sitka, Unalaska and Kodiak island, crossing the Yukon near its mouth.

The city of Nome passed an uneventful winter. There was no visitation from fire whatever, which was considered a piece of rare good fortune, as all buildings were of wood, crowded together, and it would have been very difficult to fight fire during the extreme cold weather. "The health of the community has been excellent, and a municipal government, existing by common consent and without the sanction of law, maintained excellent order and police and sanitary regulations.

Work on a number of the principal gold claims was resumed a short time before the arrival of the steamer, but discontinued on account of the cold snap. Little prospecting was done during the winter season, but some very rich discoveries were reported. On discovery claim on Shovel creek, a $16 nugget was found. One half of the claim was immediately afterwards sold for $10,000. At the mouth of Anvil creek a strip was made of five feet of pay dirt, running from twenty five cents to $2 a pan. The latest sensation was at Topuk, where a great many miners were washing out from $10 to $50 a day each. On one claim in the district $15,000 worth of gold was taken out in one week this spring, and $50,000 during the month of April. These results were obtained by primitive methods, as little or no work has been done by machinery, although several large plants for mining and washing were taken up this spring.

At Behring City and Bluff City, new settlements up the sea coast, hundreds of men are at work on the free beach claims, washing out from $10 to $30 a day each.

Most of the gold which has come to Seattle this season has come from Dawson City country. In fact, only about $400,000 in all has come from Cape Nome this year. Nearly all of that

Hon. J. H. Fletcher, formerly Governor of South Dakota, but now a resident of Salem, Ore., says: "For over two years my daughter had been declining from a strong, healthy, rosy-cheeked girl to a pale, weak and helpless invalid. She was afflicted with terrible headaches, and gradually grew weaker and more languid, apparently without cause. I tried several doctors, but all without avail. Finally, to please a friend, I bought a box of

and to our surprise, before it was used up her headaches ceased, the color began to return to her cheeks and lips and her strength began to assert itself. I bought five boxes more, and by the time she had finished them she was completely restored, and to-day she is a robust, rosy, healthy girl instead of a pale, tired and sickly one."—From the Oregon Independent, Salem, Ore.

from both districts comes in amounts of from $1,500 to $10,000, thus indicating the large number of prospectors who were successful in their quest for riches. One day's deposits of the assay office, amounting to $300,000, was made by 55 different persons.

The largest nugget ever found in the Yukon country was recently discovered at Cheekaloo hill, opposite Nolon Bonanza, by Jeremiah Lynch. It weighs seven pounds and is thirteen inches in diameter. It is valued at $2,000. Its gold value is $1,250. M. McKee, owner of claim 29, Eldorado district, arrived in Seattle June 28, with 1,000 nuggets from his claim valued at $25,000. One was larger than a man's fist and contains 3000 worth of gold. It is valued at $1,000.

The Alaskan gold mines are not the only ones tributary to Seattle, nor is gold mining the only industry which receives the attention of her people. With 7,000 persons departing from this port for Cape Nome in a single month of May, that traffic naturally holds the first place in the public mind. But meanwhile the many and rich mines of Washington and British Columbia are increasing their working forces and multiplying their product.

A new placer discovery was made early in June near Blaine, Washington, and a considerable rush set in to the new camp, which prospects rich in fine gold for a considerable distance along the shore of the sound.

O. M. MOORE.

"UNCLE REMUS" AS A POET.

A recent issue of the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post contained a poem by Joel Chandler Harris, better known as "Uncle Remus." In the introduction it is said: "In the early seventies occasional poems appeared in the Savannah News over the modest initials, 'J. C. H.' They were good poems, and it was known that the author was a young man who had come from the country to edit the State news department of the Savannah paper," etc. The poem which followed, "Juliette," is said to have been "one of his earliest poetical efforts." This is not correct. In the sixties Mr. Harris had his first, and probably last, bohemian experience, in New Orleans, and was a frequent contributor of verse to the Sunday papers of that city. Neither then nor while engaged on the Savannah paper did he strike the vein of negro lore which later led to fame and fortune. That happened after he had moved to Atlanta and joined the staff of the Atlanta Constitution. But to return to New Orleans, where Mr. Harris had gone from his home in rural Georgia to fill an engagement with Wm. Evelyn, publisher of the short-lived Crescent Monthly and of other literary ventures. The Crescent City then, and for years before, was an ideal place for a young literary man, and verse seemed the natural mode of expression. In a scrapbook I have several of the poems of Mr. Harris, with those of his contemporaries of that day. Swinburne had just then dawned upon the literary world, and there is more than a trace of his musical rhythm in one of these poems. Here is one of them:

THE SEA WIND.

O sweet south wind! O soft south wind,
O wind from off the sea!
When you blow to the inland ports of home
Kiss my love for me.
And when you have kissed her, sweet
South wind,
Tell her I never forget—
For the pale white mists of parting tears
Are floating round me yet.
Tell her I sit all day and dream
Of the joys that time might bring
Till the old love poems float in my heart
Meet together and sing.
And the tune—O wind—that they sing and sing
(With a burst of passionate rhyme)
Is "The Lover's Prayer"—a sweet sad air—
A song of the olden time.
Touch her lips lightly, sweet south wind,
As I should, were I there:
And dry up the tears in her violet eyes,
And play with her purple hair.
O soft south wind! O sweet south wind!
O wind from off the sea!
When you blow to the inland ports of home
Kiss my love for me!

We read the other day that "Uncle Remus" has resigned from the staff of the Atlanta Constitution that he might have more time to play with his grandchildren. This is hard to realize, for when the above, and many other love lyrics were written he was a gay young bachelor.

FASHIONS AT SARATOGA.

Breakfast Dresses, Blue Poulards, Black Velvet Trimmings, Muff Hats, Colored Organdies, New Slippers.

[Correspondence of The Journal.]

Nowhere else in America can such a variety of fashion or eccentricity be seen as in this unique place, where the desire for health or pleasure causes the obscure individual to gaze admiringly upon the charming toilettes of the millionaire's wife, or the latter to covet the fresh, fair and tranquil face of the former. Greater diversity of costume exists in the morning than at other times, and linens, piques, dotted foulards, dotted and striped Swiss muslins, mohair suits in blue, gray, tan, pearl or white, are so attractive that no better entertainment can be devised than to watch the passer-by. Mercerized linens are really elegant—very simply made, with stitched plaits and Eton jackets sometimes with an oriental silk sailor collar. Independent skirts and waists were never more numerous—usually a high grade of both, and white waists are embroidered, tucked, with hemstitching in addition, or "all over" embroidery, or of satin ribbon and lace alternating, not forgetting a hundred different styles of silk waists.

ALMOST EVERY FEMININE

Has a foulard silk, and the larger proportion blue, trimmed with cream or white lace; skirts generally made with a plaiting, or circular flounce, to which the overskirt is fastened, although cut in squares, points or scallops. Very narrow black velvet (two rows) running around an open-meshed lace about an inch wide, was used on a plain soft taffeta costume worn by a Baltimore belle. The rage for black velvet is unprecedented, spreading from the hotel chambermaids to the wealthy guest. Every one wears a black velvet ribbon around the neck, or a velvet collar.

EVERY DEPARTMENT OF FASHION

Has been invaded. Some organdy dresses have seventeen to twenty rows on the skirt, besides ruffles bound with velvet, and a guimpe and sleeves of velvet put on in squares, and such costumes are by no means rare on hotel verandas. An elegant white-independent waist of high-class applique, woven in open-scarf, worn by a young Philadelphia matron, had rows of black velvet running through lengthwise with a black velvet knotting at the left sides. The skirt was taffeta, trimmed with black velvet. Her hair was arranged in a wavy Pompadour all around the head, with several small puffs at the centre. Two handsome Rhine stone side combs were at either side, and a large black velvet bow, a little at the left side of the front, and from her golden locks was wafted the delicate aroma of that old-time favorite, Murray & Lyman's Florida water, which is very generally used by ladies who adopt the prevailing fad of perfuming their hair.

SILK MUFF HATS

Are more beautiful than ever, with the addition of one or two large roses nestling in among the soft folds and crinkles, or one mammoth rose with attendant buds and foliage, is even more effective. Evening brings out lovely lace or chiffon dresses, the latter often times with sprays of Renaissance lace applied on, or black lace is sometimes preferred, in imitation of various flowers. Colored organdies, with the skirts cut in small goss with a double-edged band of white lace connecting the gores and converging at the waist, are quite popular, the corsage and sleeves in keeping—the ever present accordion plaited ruffle having several rows of narrow lace insertion matching the wide bands.

SHOES AND HOSIERY

Do not necessarily match this season, and tan shoes are still the "stand by" for morning, with or without black hosiery. A black patent leather Oxford shoe with heavy soles is appropriate for any but an evening costume, then the low cut slipper appears—the newest dotted with steel nail heads—or a plain dot slipper with red, blue or pink heels is very fashionable. All red slippers are also in vogue, looking very pretty in the evening with a white costume.

Farrington's Map of Maine.

The latest, and best map of Maine, is that recently issued by Col. E. C. Farrington. It is more than a map; it is an encyclopedia of the State as well. Not only are the railroads and lakes mapped, but the distance between stations on the railroads is indicated, and more than that it can be told at a glance what kind of fish may be caught in each lake. These are but a few of the different points that make it of such value that a great demand is expected, not only from fishermen and sportsmen from other States. An index for ready reference goes with the map, so arranged that all the places can be found quickly. Not only this, but every shore town, money order, postoffice, express, telegraph, the New England Telephone and Telegraph stations, and the Eastern Telephone and their connections with the Franklin Telephone Company's stations, the population of counties and towns for 1890, railroads and steamboat lines are indicated. The maps are put at a price which will bring them within the reach of anyone, the wall map and index book of information selling for $2, the pocket map for 75 cents, and the map in veneer case for $5. Mrs. George E. Brackett of Belfast has the agency for the sale of these maps in Waldo and Hancock counties, and will solicit orders in this city.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

The Addition During the Year May Exceed 437,846 Tons.

The Bureau of Navigation says that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1900, the total tonnage of shipping officially numbered, amounted to 417,034 gross tons. Full returns from Honolulu will not be received for a fortnight, but about 38,000 tons of Hawaiian vessels were entitled to American documents under the act of Congress creating the Territory of Hawaii. Porto Rican vessels were also by act of Congress entitled to American documents, but they aggregate less than 1,000 tons. Complete figures will probably show that the actual additions to the American merchant fleet during the year have surpassed the 437,846 gross tons documented during the fiscal year 1874, when the law required all canal boats in domestic trade to be documented. In that event the addition to our merchant fleet during the fiscal year will have been greater than during any year since 1854. The figures will be slightly reduced by the fact that the issue of official numbers and of marine documents are not simultaneous. The vessels built in the United States and officially numbered during the year aggregate 381,863 gross tons. This record was surpassed in 1874, when 432,725 gross tons were built in the United States and documented. Of the new vessels built during the year 483, of 213,052 gross tons, are steam vessels; 575, of 92,025 gross tons, are sail vessels, including barges with sail power; and 70,180 tons are barges and a few canal boats for Canadian trade without power of self-propulsion. The large proportion of steam vessels, 56 per cent, of the total, makes this year's addition to the fleet in value and in carrying power superior to the additions in 1874 or of any other year in our history.

The most important additions of the year have been the large steel vessels built for the trade of the Great Lakes. They include the James J. Hill, of 6,025 gross tons, the largest merchant vessel built in the United States during 1900, nine other lake steamships and two steel schooner barges, each of 5,000 gross tons and five lake steamships of over 4,000 gross tons. On the seaboard the largest vessel built is the steamship California, 5,870 gross tons, launched at San Francisco, which will be the pioneer vessel in opening regular steam communication between Hawaii and the Atlantic ports of the United States. No other vessel of 5,000 gross tons or over has been documented during the year, but six steamships of over 4,000 tons for the Atlantic coasting trade have been built.

The only vessel built during the year exclusively for foreign trade has been the steamship Maracaibo of 1,771 gross tons, for the Red D line in the Venezuelan mail trade. The sister steamships, San Juan and Ponce, of 3,500 gross tons, and the Porto Rico, 1,257 gross tons, giving the island the best means of steam communication with the United States it ever had, are the first maritime results of the annexation of Porto Rico. The steel ship Edward Sewall, 5,700 gross tons, and the steel bark Kaulaiki, 1,570 gross tons, for the Hawaii trade, are the square rigged vessels built, but eleven schooners, each of 1,000 tons gross were constructed for the Atlantic coast trade.

Additions from other sources than construction during the year have been repaired wrecks, 3,845 tons. Hawaiian vessels numbered at San Francisco since June 14, 8,841 tons, vessels sold to citizens by the government, 7,320 tons, admitted by special acts of Congress, 5,764 tons. American vessels returned from foreign flags, 3,607 tons.

Full return will probably show that the United States documented tonnage of the United States on June 30, 1900, was the first time since 1865, has again reached 5,000,000 gross tons. The tonnage registered for foreign trade, however, will probably be slightly below 5,000,000 gross tons, the figures for June 30, 1899, the increase in the Alaskan trade, carried on mainly by registered vessels, has checked somewhat during the year the steady decline in American tonnage registered for foreign trade.

Of the 1,068 steam and sailing vessels of 395,677 gross tons built and numbered during the year, 98, of 185,434 tons, were steel, 95, of 119,555 tons, were wood, and three of 888 tons, iron. The proportion of steel construction is thus much the greatest in our history. This result is attributable also to the Great Lakes construction, where of a total of 99,770 gross tons, 95,495 tons, 25 vessels were steel steam vessels. The numbered construction on the Atlantic seaboard comprised 715 vessels of 160,576 tons, of which 75,444 tons were wood. Numbered construction on the Pacific coast comprised 37,280 gross tons, and on the Mississippi, Ohio and Western rivers 131 vessels of 7,529 tons.

For purposes of comparison vessels under construction in Great Britain on March 31, the latest figures available, were 534 of 1,290,422 gross tons, of which 115 were ocean steel steamships of 4,000 gross tons or over, the balance of over 10,000 tons gross. During the three months ended March 31, Great Britain launched 129 steamships of 264,208 gross tons. On that date British vessels under construction were 125,000 tons less than for the corresponding date in 1899.

In the July Atlantic, Candace Wheeler has a second paper on "Content in a Garden." She tells of her experiments in domesticating rare wild flowers and the variations due to soil and locality. Over all is a gentle philosophy which will attract many people who know nothing of the pleasures and meditations of the amateur flower gardener.

"Tuppenny Travels in London," by Kate Douglas Wiggin in the June Atlantic, is a delightful travel sketch showing the variety of scenes and people and many historical landmarks which may be seen from the top of a London bus.

THE REPUBLICAN JOURNAL POOR & SON, DRUGGISTS

SPAIN, June 10, 1900. That ragged slopes and clothed them with flowers and verdure and raised hanging gardens and fountains, in imitation of those on the declivities of the Alhambra, which are all artificial, though rivaling nature herself in beauty. Occupying an eminence bare of trees, the palace is directly exposed to winds from the snowy Guadarrama, and in winter is often so bitterly cold that the sentries are almost frozen. Despite all their royal splendors, the poor kings and queens of Spain, shivering in these vast, draughty apartments, with their marble doors and no decent heating apparatus, are not half so comfortable as the servants in our ordinary furnished homes of the United States.

It seems but a natural step from this abode of royalty to the last resting place of Spanish kings, though the Escorial is thirty-four kilometers north-west from Madrid, by railway. Its location is admirably chosen, considering the purpose for which it was designed, both site and structure being eminently typical of the gloomy spirit of Philip II. Standing just under the crest of the icy Sierra, its massive walls and towers looking as if hewn by Titans from a single block of stone, the first view of the tremendous pile produces a feeling of depression in the mind of the visitor: which grows apace in the gloomy interior until it develops into a first-class case of "the blues". Rarely, indeed, does the sun ever shine upon its mist-enshrouded towers; while the leaden sky, the entire absence of animal life, and the bare rocks, destitute of the slightest trace of vegetation, harmonize perfectly with the sombre and frowning aspect of this palace of the dead. Think what a victim to hypochondria Philip "El Prudente" must have been to choose such a site for his home in all the sunny land of Spain! His objection was to carry out the will of his father in constructing a royal burial-place, and at the same time to fulfil a vow made at the battle of San Quentin (Aug. 10, 1557), when he implored the aid of San Lorenzo—he who was broiled, over a slow fire, by order of Valentians. So the building, whose correct title is "El Real sitio de San Lorenzo el Real de Escorial," is at once a temple, a palace, a treasury, a tomb and a museum, unlike any other in the world. Begun in 1563, thousands of laborers worked thirty years to build it, at a cost of about sixty million dollars. The plan, as everybody knows, is fashioned after a gridiron, the instrument of San Lorenzo's martyrdom, and the grim structure is unrelieved by any sort of ornamentation, as befitting the abode of those strict disciplinarians, the gnomes of the Escorial is its superb church—largely as an ordinary cathedral, and more impressive in effect by reason of the simplicity of its grand proportions. Each of the four pillars which support the dome contains a chapel of sufficient size to accommodate any congregation in Belfast. On either side of the altar are kneeling statues of Charles V. and Philip II, with their wives, in gilded bronze, their elaborate vestments blazoned with the arms of Spain and Austria in mosaics of precious stones. Most of the principal decorations of the altar and the massive reliquaries enshrined in its niches, were destroyed or stolen by the French; but from the few that remain some idea may be gained of the enormous value of those that disappeared. The chapel of the Escorial contained more holy relics than any other in Christendom. All told, there are four thousand and seven hundred and twenty-two of them, and many volumes have been written concerning them and the miracle-workers they have performed. They include the perfect bodies of Saints and martyrs, and enough skulls and odd bones to stock a grave-yard. The most venerated are kept in reliquaries of solid gold, and those of inferior sanctity in caskets of reposse silver. The magnificent tabernacle, broken into bits by the French, was the masterpiece of a famous Italian artist, who spent ten years in the work. It was in the form of a double Grecian temple and was composed of bronze, gold, enamel and rock-crystal, set with emeralds and rubies of extraordinary size and beauty. Back on the high altar are the three rooms in which Philip II lived for fourteen years—half king, half monk, boasting that from the foot of

Among many interesting letters and papers in the possession of Miss Emily P. Frothingham of this city are some of Prentiss Mellen, former chief justice of Maine, and at that time in the United States Senate, to his niece, Miss Lydia Prentiss, afterwards the wife of Rev. Wm. Frothingham and the mother of Miss Frothingham. The letters are finely written, well preserved, and bear the original seal used before envelopes were invented. Following are some extracts from them:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24, 1819.

DEAR LYDIA. Your acceptable letter was received and read yesterday in the senate, amid the wise ones of the land, and, if the truth be told, it was the only letter that bore the way of the north pole and so around Cape Horn and up the Potomac to this place, without any signature I should have recognized it as the handy and hearty work of your ladyship. So peculiar is your composition, good sense, just remark, point and playfulness of manner, always unite to form a letter so agreeable and pleasing, that always welcome. There is no flattery in the last sentence. Since I finished it, I have read it over and over and I can take my corporal oath that it is true and every deposition. Speaking of deposition reminds me of law suits and these words remind me of what took place in the Supreme Court Tuesday morning, which was no more nor less than this that Chief Justice Marshall delivered a long and learned opinion of this Court in the famous case depending between Dartmouth College and Dartmouth University. Dartmouth was in favor of the College—and so the University and Gov. Plumer's trustees and hopes and all have gone to the bottom. When you receive this letter tell my brother and sister of my professor and his better part. Here ends my episode and now I will proceed with the body of the work. Speaking of body makes me think of your body and that reminds me of last evening, because you know, or wish to know, when you have read along a little farther, that last evening I attended the prodigious crowd of fashionable corners of the United States. The ladies and gentlemen were so thick and so happy that they could hardly move—and this happy state of affairs was in favor of the natural and artificial beauty adorned the cheeks and so forth of the ladies, while we, the lords of the creation, were looking on and admiring the several sorts of comfort that are to be found in this world. In the midst of this forest of ladies and gentlemen, once in a while I could see Dr. Kirkland, Gen. Jackson, then the Judges of the nation. I was seated in the front row, in the state of suffocation till about 9.30 and then made our manners and came off home. And I cannot end this page better than in the language of some of our poets: "The soul distrusts, asks if this be joy."

Another letter under the date of Feb. 13, 1820, says:

Should you not admire to spend the winter here? Go to the palace, squeeze and be squeezed, see the splendors of the Republic and the magnificence of the city. By the way, I spent a charming hour at Mr. Brown's last evening, talking sentiment with two beautiful ladies from Georgia and Carolina. A cold night, a fire and ice cream in the street, and a crowd of people that almost all the beauty and glare and glory and wealth and comfort of this world depend on that same thing, commonly called the things of the world, should not warm; wise, foolish; sentimental, nonsentimental.

And another says:

Many a man who lives in a distant State comes all the way to Washington for an office; but can't find it. The President can't find it. He has to give the office, especially if it is a bad one, to the man who is in the course of human events to be a Federalist in this "era of good feeling." Again I can find half as much comfort here as at home among those whom I love. It is no use. I can find ladies, and dinners, and parties, and hacks, and waltzing, and such stuff, but the novelty is gone, and all these things are so common that they are unsatisfactory to me as flattery, for instance, would be to me any other beautiful part of creation. I am very impatient to call on you at Cambridge, and are now within forty-six days of the end of the summer, which should happen in the French minister; and at the parties of their homes. To-day the Vice President called and left his card. So we go. In the morning he goes on very favorable. He constantly attended to their delight, and is on the tapis. We have only short speeches in our house and no notes taken. In the other house they dash and argue, and beat the air, and every body should be able to rise you to attend to the debates which will take place next week. They will be published in the Boston papers the week following. They relate to the famous General Jackson.

Wiscasset & Quebec.

Hon. S. S. Brown, attorney for the Waterville Trust Company, is quoted as saying that it is not probable that any move will be made to sell out the Wiscasset & Quebec Railroad for some little time. It will be recalled that about a year ago the Trust Co., as trustee, took possession of the road as the preparatory move in foreclosing on the bonds of the road, as the railroad has not been able to pay interest. During the present month the time expires in which any move may be made, and the matter is in the hands of the trustees. It is not at all probable, those interested say, that any attempt at redemption will be made. When the year is up the trustees will formally come into possession of the road, and then it will be probable that the trustees will continue to operate a road that is being run at a loss. Mr. Brown said that he could not say. In the subsequent conversation he intimated that the road would be unloaded eventually.

The Old Splint-Bottomed Chair.

Aye, set it down here in the corner,
The old-fashioned spindle legged chair,
And give it a place in the parlor,
Among the pictures and tapestries there.

It is lacking in polish and finish,
The splints are broken and worn.
The cushions are faded and torn.
Its cushions are faded and torn.

'Tis a veteran left from the twenties,
Faded and old, and splint-bottomed chair,
And often in retrospect vision
I fancy I'm seeing him there.

But dearer than all, there has rested
Against its cushions, the head
Of the boy who fought with the Spaniards
And lies'neath a Cuban sward—dead!

Not all the wealth of the Orient
Could buy that splint bottomed chair;
For 'twas there he sat when we parted,
And I whispered a "goodspeed" and prayer.

With fondest memories 'tis hallowed
And shall have but the tenderest care;
For it was there he sat when we parted,
That ragged old splint bottomed chair!

RHEUMATISM

Is due to an acid poison which gains access to the blood through failure of the proper organs to carry off and keep the system clear of all morbid, effete matter. This poison through the general circulation is deposited in the joints, muscles.

Rheumatism may attack with such suddenness and severity as to render a person helpless and bed-ridden, with distorted limbs and developing, with slight wandering pains, just severe enough to induce in such cases is to grow worse, and finally become chronic.

Like other blood diseases, Rheumatism is often inherited, and food, insufficient clothing, or anything calculated to impair the blood in early life, but more often not until middle age or later. In acquired or inherited,

Rheumatism is Strictly Contagious, and no limit or other external treatment can reach the trouble, and mercury, and the various mineral salts, which the doctors ruin the digestion and break down the constitution.

A remedy which builds up the general health and at the same time the only safe and certain cure for Rheumatism. S. S. S. contains solvent, purifying properties, attacks the disease in the right way, and in the right place dissolves all poisonous deposits, stimulates and reinforces the overworked action of all unhealthy accumulations. S. S. S. cures permanently and thoroughly, and keeps the blood in a pure, healthy state.

Mr. J. O. Malley, 121 W. 14th Street, Indianapolis, Ind., for eighteen months was so terribly afflicted with Rheumatism he was unable to feed or dress himself. Doctors said his case was hopeless. He had tried fifty-two prescriptions that friends had given him, without the slightest relief. A few bottles of S. S. S. cured him permanently. He has never had a rheumatic pain since. This was five years ago.

We will send free our special book on Rheumatism, which should be in the hands of every sufferer from this torturing disease. Our physicians have made blood and skin diseases a life study, and will give you any information or advice wanted, so write them fully and freely about your case. We make no charge whatever for this service. Add

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wheeler of Oakland street, have returned from a visit to Belfast, Maine. Mr. Wheeler is an old resident of Belfast and speaks highly of the Belfast Cornet Band.

Those busy bees. We told last week the story of the migration of the bees of Capt. W. L. Howe of Duck Trap, Freeman, the Camden stage driver, tells us the bees are still in their new quarters, making honey for dear life, and the other occupants of the cottage are now quite reconciled to the intrusion.

Close time on salmon. The salmon fishing season on the Penobscot closed at midnight Saturday. About 75 fish were taken with the fly at Bangor pool, with an aggregate weight of nearly 1,000 pounds.

The down river weir fishery yielded about 300 fish, weighing about 14,000 pounds, which is somewhat better than the average of recent years.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. You cannot miss seeing Dunsmore's advt. this week, in which a midsummer sale of shoes at a third or a half of the regular price is announced.

OLD HOME WEEK. Last week Mayor Poor received the following letter from Congressman Burleigh:

Augusta, Me., July 11, 1900. Hon. Clarence O. Poor, Belfast, Maine. DEAR SIR: Yours of the 11th inst. is at hand. It will be a pleasure to me to do anything in my power to secure a visit from one of the United States war ships to your harbor during the "State Home Week."

As soon as I get anything definite about the matter I will communicate with you further. Yours very sincerely, E. C. BURLEIGH.

At a meeting of the Belfast Old Home Week Association Monday evening the finance committee reported good progress in securing subscriptions, and there is assurance that there will be ample financial support.

The official invitations were received from Augusta that evening, and will be sent out this week. Hon. Joseph Williamson, chairman of the committee on invitations, reported that he had a list of about five hundred names of natives and former residents, to whom invitations will be sent.

The invitations will bear the Pine Tree stamp, specially designed for this purpose.

The program will include two ball games instead of one, as first announced. Manager Spinnery will arrange a game with the Rocklands in Belfast, and have a return game in Rockland during the week.

Arrangements will also be made with some other nine for a game here. It is expected to give Pinefore three Wednesday evening and in Bucksport Friday evening; and the Band may be engaged Thursday for a parade. A floral bicycle parade has been suggested.

Some say, "why have an elaborate program? Many who come will care only to meet their friends and have a quiet time." That is all right. There is nothing compulsory about anything in the proposed line of entertainment. Our citizens will entertain their guests in any way they may desire.

There will of course be little social gatherings apart from the general festivities. We only want our visitors to feel at home and to enjoy themselves.

A meeting of the executive board of the Old Home Week Association was held last evening to arrange the program. Up to yesterday noon the subscription had amounted to nearly $400.

BASE BALL.

The second game between the Belfasts and Boston Journals last Friday resulted like the first on the Saturday previous, in a victory for the visitors, and by the same score, 4 to 3. There was a large attendance when the game was called. When the play was fairly under way it looked like a big score on both sides. The Belfasts got in 6 scores, a home run and three-bagger in the first inning, and the Belfasts followed with 4 runs and 3 single hits. In the second Boston scored 3, with 2 singles, 1 two-bagger and 1 three-bagger. Belfast got 3 bases on balls, 2 scores and a base hit, when a heavy shower struck and everybody started for shelter.

The game was declared off. At 4:30 a new game was called, and the players were themselves again. Belfast got 2 scores in the first inning, but shut out the Belfasts until the 7th. Belfast did not score again until the 7th. Boston made 2 in the 6th, when, with 2 men on bases, Barrington knocked a fly to right field, which was dropped. Crockett and Johnson made their usual good record as battery. Each pitcher struck out 7 men.

Crockett let but one man down on balls, his second man this season, which is a record of which any pitcher may well feel proud. Patterson did not get any heavy hits on the ball, and sent 3 into the hands of the second baseman, but he evened it up handsomely taking 3 long flies that were sent into his field. George Darby got the only two-bagger made by the Belfasts. The score:

"Hurk out by being hit by batted ball. When the Belfasts finished their tour it was found that they were short of money. They had good patronage in Belfast, and received all that was due them here and elsewhere, but spent their money too freely; not in dissipation, as they conducted themselves in a very gentlemanly manner wherever they went. The players called on for money and the manager advanced it, until they were surprised by finding themselves short. As the regular Belfast team was engaged to go to Old Town a benefit game was arranged between the Boston Journals and a picked nine, and a fairly interesting game was played Saturday afternoon.

The Belfast team had never played together. Ross and Barrington of the Belfasts were our battery the first four innings, after which Mason pitched. Poor and Hammons of the High school nine played first base and right field. Ralph Darby played two innings as left, but retired and Harriman, a new man on the Belfast diamond, took his place. Will Johnson and Poor led in the batting: Will got a 2 and a 3 bagger, Poor a single, a 2 and a 3 bagger, and scored twice, got a single, stole 2 bases, made a sacrifice hit and fled out once to long centre.

The Belfasts made two double plays: Walter Darby fled out to third, and Haney threw to first, putting Hammons out; and Goode threw to Mulloy, who tagged out Brown going to 3d, then passed to Burke, who put out Ross at 1st. Arthur Stevens struck for Pinckney in three innings. The visitors won, 16 to 12, a scrub team in Belfast thus put up a better game against them than some of the regular teams have made elsewhere.

The Belfasts went to Old Town Saturday and defeated the nine of that city by a score of 12 to 9. They drove to Hampden in teams from Gentner's, and thence to Old Town by electric. Conroy and Fred Johnson were battery for Belfast and Cushman and Little for Old Town. The teams were as follows:

Belfast—Conroy, p.; Johnson, c.; G. Darby, 1b; Berry, 2b.; O'Connell, 3b.; B. Darby, s. s.; Crockett, l. f.; Patterson, c. f.; Colcord, r. f.

Old Town—Cushman, p.; Little, c.; Small, 1b.; Simmons, 2b.; McAllister, 3b.; Newton, s. s.; Beattie, l. f.; Brown, c. f.; Dorr, r. f.

The ground was very rough, even in the in-field, and both sides had difficulty in getting at the ball. Johnson, Conroy, McAllister and Simmons got two-base hits, and Small a three-bagger.

Rockland was defeated by Belfast on the Congress street grounds Tuesday in a hotly contested game, by a score of 9 to 4. Among the features of the game were a double play in which Crockett struck to short, Brown threw to 2d, where Saunders put out Bert Darby, then threw to 1st, where Teague put out Crockett. Meserve struck a long fly to right field; Patterson ran for it and stumbled but caught it as he fell and came up with the ball in his hand. McLoon started from 3d to steal home, Johnson and Murphy closed in on him, passing the ball from one to the other, but Murphy finally got him. Bert

Darby struck a liner which went past the 2d baseman, so close that nearly everybody called it an error, but some argued that Bert made a safe hit. The score:

Conroy and Murphy of the Belfasts remain with Belfast and Ross goes to Bangor as pitcher. The others have returned to Boston.

The Clam Corner nine, composed of small boys, has won all of the ten games played this season, some with boys considerably older than themselves. They defeated a picked nine Saturday 18, to 3, and then disbanded for the season.

Horace Newenham, the captain and star pitcher of the Colby College baseball team, received a foul tip on the second finger of the right hand July 16th while playing behind the bat for Houlton. The finger was split and the bone exposed. The attending surgeons say that Mr. Newenham will never be able to pitch again as the accident will cause a permanent stiffening of the joint.

The Belfast locals wore their new dark blue caps and stockings for the first time last Saturday, when they were photographed by Tuttle on the post office steps.

The Belfasts will go to Rockland to-day by buckboard, and play a return game with the Linerock City boys. Saturday the steamer Castine will take the Belfasts to Bangor, where a close game may be looked for. The steamer will leave Lewis wharf at 8, and Northport Campground at 8:30, and leaves Bangor to return at 7 p. m.

WHAT A BLESSING.
Many of our Belfast Readers are Learning to Appreciate.

What a blessing it is. Sought after by thousands. Many a miserable man is happy now. Nights of unrest, days of trouble. An itching skin disease means this. Itching piles mean it. Eczema just as bad, and just as hard to cure. But Doan's Ointment relieves at once and cures all itches of the skin.

A blessing to a suffering public. Here's Belfast proof to back our statement. Mr. L. C. Putnam of Searsport avenue, shore road, says: "I had itching piles for twelve years, and I got more or less with every doctor in town, and used no end of salves and ointments, and I got a box at Edmund Wilson's drug store. I got more relief from it than anything I ever tried. It is without exception the best ointment for what it is advertised that I ever used."

He emigrated in a sailing vessel, arriving at St. John, N. B., in 1847, where he worked one year, when he came to Stillwater, Me., living there for a time, and in Bangor and Belfast. He came to Seaport in March, 1851, and moved his family here in June the same year. His wife was Margaret Finnegan, who was born in Glen, in the same county as himself, and by whom he had eight children, all of whom are living—John H. and William, Ellen, Katherine, Charles, Robert F., Margaret and Julia B. SETTLEMENT PENDING AT MT. WALDO.

We hear on good authority that it is highly probable that a settlement between the Mt. Waldo Granite Company, (John Peirce, manager), contractors for the Chicago post-office building, and the Granite Cutters' National Union, will be made before the close of the present week. The terms have already been settled on, with the exception of one matter of detail, and although these will have to be ratified by a vote of the Union before going into effect, there is little question that a full settlement will be made and work resumed under Union conditions very soon. If the present arrangement goes, the men will receive a minimum of $3 per day of eight hours, and all will work by the day, with no piece-bill at all. The difference existing in regard to fines on the scabs, the Union rate being $75 and the company being willing to make it $25. If this settlement is made, as expected, one of the building will be cut at Hallowell and the remainder at Mt. Waldo and Vinalhaven. (Rockland Opinion.)

Speaking of conditions in Manila, under American administration, the British consul in that city says: "Improvements are visible in every direction, and already the town has quite a different appearance from last year. The work of draining the filthy town ditches and stagnant pools may possibly entail an epidemic, but the advantage to posterity is inestimable. There are, no doubt, at present golden opportunities for the employment of capital and talent in many local trades. The departments of the Postoffice and Telegraph, being now under American and British control, are admirably conducted."

Rockland, Me., July 12.—Revenue cutter Biggs was lunar laden and a large schooner Benjamin T. Biggs of Portsmouth, abandoned and on fire, 5 miles southeast of Matineus rock. After extinguishing the fire, the cutter towed the schooner to this port, arriving early this morning. The vessel lay directly in the track of steamers and was a serious menace to navigation. The Biggs was lunar laden and a large part of her deck load was burned, but the cargo in her hold is in good condition. The crew of the Biggs was taken off by another vessel and landed at Vineyard Haven a few days ago. This is supposed to be the schooner that the British steamer Tyndale picked up last Sunday and towed as far as Matineus rock, where the tow lines parted and the tow was abandoned.
